

Susan Pecora

Artist Statement

I synthesize the world through drawing and painting, always have. It began at about four, when my parents gave me blank pads of paper to draw and color while living on their small boat cruising up and down the New England coastline during the summer months. I take a sketchbook with me wherever I go then work my sketches into more finished paintings back in the studio. I work in watercolor or egg tempera on board. I have long been attracted to the wildly diverse nature of New England and it's varied subject matter from the coastlines to the factories and farmland.
